

Call for Nominations

The Novo Nordisk Prize

2023

Nomination call closes on 1 June 2022

The Novo Nordisk Prize recognizes an active scientist for her/his excellent research, inspirational leadership and mentoring, leading to a major discovery or breakthrough in biomedical science. The Prize is intended to award and further support biomedical research with translational impact, in Europe.

The Prize is of DKK 5 million (appr. EUR 672,000) and consists of a DKK 4,5 million (appr. EUR 605,000) research grant and a personal award of DKK 0,5 million (appr. EUR 67,000).

The Foundation will grant an additional DKK 0,5 million for hosting an international symposium within the recipient's field(s) of research.

Nominations:

The Foundation welcomes nominations by individual researchers and by research institutions including academic and industrial institutions, and research funding agencies.

A nomination must be submitted electronically via the nomination form:

<https://novonordiskfonden.dk/en/grants/novo-nordisk-prize-2023/>

The nomination and review processes are confidential.

Eligibility:

- Nominees must demonstrate scientific excellence that has led to a major discovery or breakthrough in understanding of human health and disease, prevention, diagnosis and/or treatment of the disease that have shown translational impact.
- Nominees must have a current position and an active research program at a public, non-profit research institution and/or in a company based in a European country.
- Nominees must serve as inspirational leaders and role models for young scientists. Nominees may have any nationalities.
- Nominators (individual or institution) are not limited in number of nominations.

Ineligibility:

- Self-nominations are not accepted
- Nominators cannot be family members
- The prize may not be awarded to members of the Novo Nordisk Foundation Board or committee members or to Board members, directors or employees of the Novo Group.

More about The Novo Nordisk Prize at:

<https://novonordiskfonden.dk/en/grants/novo-nordisk-prize-2023/>

Contact:
Novo Nordisk Foundation
Scientific Secretariat
novonordiskprize@novo.dk

novo nordisk fonden
Benefiting people and society